Due to arrive at Honolulu Sunday afternoon, and presumably at too late an hour for receiving an official visit from a corps of federal and territorial medical officers, the British steamship Willesden, with fourteen hundred Spanish and Portuguese immigrants, is now predicted will be sent to the quarantine wharf Monday morning, following the granting of pratique to the Oceanic liner Sierra. Twelve births are so far recorded.

A wireless message received yesterday states that 18 deaths have occurred. Three immigrants passed away while the vessel was in the Atlantic, fifteen deaths are reported since the Willesden left the Straits of Magellan for the Pacific.

Measles Epidemic.

Measles is declared as responsible for the illness and subsequent death of immigrants. Captain Musson, now master of the vessel, taking the place of Captain Cox who recently passed away, wires that forty-six cases of measles exist among the thousand or more Spanish and four hundred Portuguese passengers. Er. F. E. Trotter, in charge of the U. S. public health and quarantine service in the islands, is inclined to the opinion that perhaps the segregation of the healthy and the sick on board may have been at fault, as this rate as the vessel steamed into the Pacific.

As far as can be figured out, the deaths' have occurred mainly among children.

F. Waldron and Company, who represent the Willesden at this port, have been advised that health conditions on board the British steamship are the best.

Guard Against Former Experience. Dr. Trotter will, in company with Drs. Marshall, Sinclair, James and Territorial Health Officer Dr. Pratt, visit the Willesden on Sunday provided the vessel reaches the port before 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

If the Willesden is delayed beyond this hour she will be held at the anat Richard street wharf.
